PAUL WRITES TO HIS FRIENDS IN CORINTH

LESSON TEXT—I Cor. 1:10-13;3:5-11, 21-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Paul Writes a Letter to His Friends.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Writes a Good Letter to His Friends.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Paul Urges Team Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Paul Pleads for Christian Unity.

Concerning Contention in the Church (1:10-13).

1. Exhortation (v. 10). "That ye all speak the same thing."

In view of the fact that he besought them in the name of Jesus Christ, the one thing which he desired them to speak was the Lord's name. The name of the Lord stands for all that the Lord is and does. "That there be no divisions among you," that is, no factions, no alienation of affection. "That ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment."

2. The reason for this exhortation. (v. 11).

Word had been brought to Paul by members of the household of Chloe that wrangling was going on among the members of the Corinthian church. He assured them that he had sufficient evidence of the strife which was going on among them.

3. Nature of the contentions (v. 12).

Their disputes were about their teachers. Their interests were centering in their favorite ministers. Some were for Paul, perhaps attracted by his logic; some were for Apollos, doubtless moved by his stirring eloquence; others were for Peter. Doubtless these were Jewish converts who looked to Peter as their authority. There were still others who had as their cry "back to Christ," repudiating all human teachers.

4. The grounds of allegiance to Christ (v. 13).

(1) He is Head of the whole church. The unifying power of the body is the head. He raised the question, "Is Christ divided?" The mere raising of the question gave the answer.

(2) Redemption accomplished.

By his atoning death He has supreme Lordship over all.

(3) Allegiance to Christ acknowledged in baptism. By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body (I Cor. 12:13).

II. Concerning Christian Ministers (3:1-4:5).

Since the dissensions in the church gathered around the ministers, Paul proceeded to cure the evil by exhibiting the ministerial office in its true light. To conceive of ministers as party leaders or teachers of philosophy tends to divisions. Divisions in the church occur when men are occupied with the messenger rather than with the message. The cure in such a case is to get a right conception and proper estimate of human teachers. Ministers really are:

1. Servants of God (vv. 5, 6).

They are instruments in His hands for the execution of His will. They are men sent to deliver a message to do a definite work.

2. Ministers are equal in rank (vv. 8, 9).

They are called by the same spirit to teach the same truth, and there is to stand in the same relationship. Official hierarchy in the church has no foundation in the Scriptures.

3. Every minister must give an account to God for h' work (vv. 10-21).

If he lay other foundation than Christ he is not a Christian minister at all. If he build sound doctrine on the foundation he will receive a reward. If he build false doctrine on a true foundation he will suffer loss and receive punishment. Sorrow and anguish will be to him who builds good material upon a wrong foundation and likewise to him who builds poor material upon a right foundation. Human wisdom has no place in the solemn work of buildi.; the church of God.

4. Ministers are the property of the church (vv. 22, 23).

Frequently the assumption is that the church is owned by the ministers. Ministers should be followed only as far as they follow Christ.

5. Ministers are God's stewards (4:1-5).

Their business is to dispense His truth. They do not originate the message. God demands fidelity on their part and He will enter into judgment with them as to their faithfulness.

Proof of a Divine Reality

The best proof of a divine reality at the heart of things is the passion for growth, the desire for perfection, that makes itself felt in all who are sensitive to the possibilities of spiritual attainment.

Being Content

We have been content with a slight elevation above the evils of our time, and not intent on the inward searching, purifying and consuming of the Holy Spirit.—F. B. Meyer.

PARIS IS ALARMED FOR FASHION TRADE

Style Fixers Realize They Must Please America.

Paris.—There must be a new method established in the creation of French styles for the United States and South America.

That is the opinion of M. Rene Herbst, president of the Society of Modern Decorators, who is spreading propaganda for the creation of special establishments throughout the world for the presentation of French models.

He is not alone in his belief, and the French style-fixers are ready to contribute a fund of several million francs to protect their interests abroad. They have been considerably alarmed, they admit, during the last few years by the tendency of American dressmakers, milliners, and interior decorators to take the French motifs and adapt them to the particular needs of their own country.

During the winter, several groups of French business men are to visit the principal cities of both the Americas. They are to study American methods and American needs. Whether they will be able to meet them without ruining their own artistic pride, according to one prominent French writer, is the question that is worrying them most.

"But we are losing several million francs of commerce every year simply because we do not give exactly what the clients want," is the argument behind the new movement. "We are too proud of our own ideas, and unless we grant some leeway to the creative genius of other nations, France's luxury trade is certain to suffer seriously during the next few years."

One-Way Traffic Plan Is Failure in London

London.—One-way traffic may be all right for American cities, but in London it has been tried and found wanting. Two committees on the traffic of London, the police committee and the streets committee have both reported that the one-way street system is "not suitable" for London.

A three months' trial period has just ended, during which certain heavily traveled streets have carried traffic in one direction only. After weighing the results of the experiment, it was decided that the one-way system is "not suitable" for London.

A three months' trial period has just ended, during which certain heavily traveled streets have carried traffic in one direction only. After weighing the results of the experiment, it was decided that the one-way system is "not suitable" for London.

The peculiar arrangement of London blamed for the inability to apply the one-way system. Whereas most American cities are laid out more or less on the gridiron system, London is a maze of twisting streets, more like a series of concentric circles connected by spokes with the Thames as diameter than anything else. The failure of the one-way plan leaves London authorities up against the question once again of trying to find some solution for untangling the most complicated traffic in the world.

Turpentine Soaked Girl Burns Self to Death

New York—Apparently disappointed in love, Miss Louisa Amelia de Hostos, thirty-eight years old, set herself afire in her upper west side apartment and died at Harlem hospital. Miss de Hostos, said by a friend to be the daughter of Eugenia de Hostos, a Porto Rican educator for whom a monument has been erected in San Juan, came to New York to seek a career as an author. At the hospital it was said she had saturated her clothing with turpentine and, after climbing into the bathtub, had applied a match.

Could Not Rest

Mrs. J. H. Nichols, who lives at 813 Elm Tree Lane, Lexington, Ky., says:

"A few years ago, my health was bad. I had very severe pains in my sides. My nerves were in a terrible condition. I could not rest.

"The lower part of my body was very sore. I did not feel like eating, and did not sleep well at all at night.

"A friend of mine recommended Cardui. I began taking it and new quite an improvement in my condition. I kept it up until I felt strong and well."

About a year ago, Mrs. Nichols says, she found herself in a nervous, run-down condition. "I took Cardui again," she adds, "and it helped me wonderfully. It is a splendid tonic."

"I AM well pleased with the N-13 Papec purchased this year," wrote H. B. Austin, Oct. 8, 1925. "It has never clogged the feed and runs so light. It will cut and elevate twice as much as any cutter that I ever saw. The feed roll is a great thing, no slugging of bundles on the feed table."

Light draft, low operating cost and long life make the Papec the most economical cutter. Turns short, has a 3 h. p. gasoline engine, a light or a heavy tractor. If you have a silo, a Papec will earn you big returns. Let us show you how.

Intelligence

Intelligence is an inherited characteristic which grows year by year in childhood, and is fully developed about sixteen or seventeen. After which you may cultivate the mind through study and experience; but not by the means of a brain cell can you increase your "intelligence." Many grown-ups, and some of them successful as the world counts success, if tested seien tifically, would find that their "Intelligence" was no more than that of their schoolboy son of twelve.—Glasgow Herald.

LOTTO IS POPULAR AMONG ITALIAN POOR

State Gets Revenue From the Weekly Drawings.

Rome.—Recent statistics show that what was called the game of guesses—playing state lotto—has lost its hold on all but the poorer players. It is true that thousands play in different cities, but the frenzy of prewar players, ready to stake everything on their weekly gamble, has disappeared. Gambling in the weekly lotto remains the most popular game for the poor, who cannot afford to attend the races. At the same time it continues to be today one of the greatest sources of revenue the state has. It has been called the tax on the poor, as by means of it a very substantial revenue is taken in.

Every week in Rome there are as many as 130,000 players, and the number has never sunk below 100,000. The district where most playing is done is Castro Pretorio, where there are the cavalry barracks. Recently 103,832 persons spent 301,138 lire—about three lire each. The minimum play is 50 centimes a number.

Hold Weekly Drawings.

The poor play because for nearly a week they are buoyed up with the hope of winning. The demon of chance lures them to take what they often cannot afford on the numbers which they either dreamed of or have been told about. Even when they lose they do not become discouraged, and play again and again.

The next district where the lotto is popular is the Monte, third Campo Marzio, in the very center of Rome. Trastevere, the popular quarter, plays less.

The weekly lotto is drawn in a palace in the center of Rome, close to the Piazza Colonna, in the Street of Humility.

At two o'clock on the balcony is fixed a glass barrel with a handle to turn it around. About half an hour later an orphan boy from one of the state asylums appears, and with him two or three officials of the lotto administration to guarantee the honesty of the drawing. With great solemnity the numbers printed on paper are called and shown and then wrapped in a lead covering exactly similar each to the other. Ninety numbers are called, wrapped and thrown into the barrel.

The excitement begins as the last three numbers, 88, 89, and 90, go into the barrel. The boy is blindfolded before he grasps the handle. He turns until all the numbers have been well mixed. Then he raises his hand so that the waiting crowd below can see that it is empty, puts to his hand and takes out the first number. It is unwrapped by the man on his right, who reads out and calls, "First extract," and so on until the five extracts are drawn.

MANSION HAS SOLID GOLD BATH FIXTURES

Sir Dhunjibhoy's Palace More Elaborate Than King's.

Windsor, England.—The most costly residence in England is known here as "The Willows," but neighbors prefer to call it "The House of the Arabian Nights."

It is the residence of Sir Dhunjibhoy Bomanji, wealthy Bombay merchant. It stands within sight of the towers of Windsor castle, one of the houses of the king and queen of England, but it is said to be furnished more elaborately than even the royal home.

Every bedroom in Sir Dhunjibhoy's home is fitted with a marble wash basin, and every hydrant, bracket and hatrack is made of solid gold. In Sir Dhunjibhoy's own room the legs of the washstand are also of gold.

All the furniture is on a corresponding style of magnificence. The rooms are furnished according to various period, and the furniture consists entirely of rare antiques. Sir Dhunjibhoy's bedroom is finished in French style in the fashion of Louis XIV.

The house of the Indian millionaire is built in Tudor style. It is surrounded by beautiful gardens, dotted with marble statuary and fountains. One of the marble statues, known as "Truth," attracts particular attention. It represents a nude woman holding aloft a mirror.

Sir Dhunjibhoy, in addition to being a connoisseur of solid gold and marble, is also a sportsman. He has a large stable of horses on his grounds, and to the rear of his garden is a miniature race track has been laid out.

With so magnificent a home, entertaining is second nature to the Bombay potentate and Lady Bomanji. Their guestrooms are almost always occupied, and Sir Dhunjibhoy has given several large functions which many British titled people attended.

Sir Dhunjibhoy Bomanji was knighted in 1922 for services rendered the British and Indian governments during the World war. He has now come to England to make his permanent residence here.

Solomon Not a Negro

There is no foundation whatever for the notion that King Solomon was a colored man; it may arise from the fact that the royal family of the Abyssinians—a black though not a negro people—claims a traditional descent from King Solomon and the queen of Sheba.
